Essential NetTools is a FREE program, available for download at Here are some reviews from this version: Ultimate Network Time Sync is just as my forum members have made it clear to me time and time again. The solution is out-of-the-box and really easy to use (providing as it does a web interface for Central Time). Dima wrote a review where he raves about the speed, so it all really comes down to time and speed. Plus, it's simple to install and use. It's not just an alarm clock but also a time editor. I was really impressed with the accuracy of this time product. Plus, the software comes with a ton of features including multi-user, shared, alarm, and more. Plus, the software runs standalone, not requiring registry editing. Plus, the software runs stand-alone, not requiring registry editing. Plus, the software runs stand-alone, not requiring registry editing. Plus, the software runs stand-alone, not requiring registry editing. And many more... So there you have it. The next version to be released: Version 4.8 was released on June 9, 2012. It's not a significant update, but if you're like me, you can always use an updated version now and then. Version 4.9 was released on July 10, 2012. The above menu lists what's new in the 4.9 release: Menu It's always nice to see a program with a new interface and updated features. You'll notice that there are fewer menus now. The old File menu is now called New/Open, whereas the two new ones, Edit and View are equally useful. The Help menu has been added, and there are several entries under it. I like that idea, as it means if you find an entry you want to know more about, you can start at the bottom and work your way up. Help_Main_Window and Help_About are now used
